LONDON, December 5.

CAPT. Ambroſe in his Majeſty's Ship the Rupert, ſail'd from Plymouth the 2d of laſt Month, to cruize off the Bay of Biſcay. On the 7th, at ſeven in the Morning, in the Latitude of 48 9 North, he ſaw two Sail to the Windward, to which he gave Chaſe. At Ten he ſaw a Sail chaſing of him, and by the Cut of her Sails ſuſpected her to be Spaniſh. There being then little Wind, Capt. Ambroſe concluded if he attempted to chaſe her ſhe would certainly run away, and that at the Diſtance ſhe was off he could not be able to come up with her before Night; he therefore judg'd it beſt to continue chaſing the two Ships he was after, as he was ignorant what they were, and was ſure to come up with them before Night. On his coming up with thoſe Ships, which was about One o'Clock, he did not fire, as uſual, to bring them to, leſt he ſhould give room to the Ship that chaſed him to ſuſpect he was a Cruizer, but ſent his Boat on board them, and finding they were Dutchmen, told them who he was, that he would keep Company with them, and that when the Ship which chaſed them came up, he would hoiſt Dutch Colours with them. He accordingly reefed his Sails as they had, got his Tacks on board right before the Wind, to hinder his Ships ſailing too faſt for them, and to prevent the Ship that chaſed him from diſcovering the Squareneſs of his Yards; and he diſguiſed his Ship ſo as to look like a Dutchman, by hauling her Guns in, and covering her Galleries Quarters and Head, with Tarpaulins. The Ship that chaſed crowded all the Sail ſhe could ſet, and by dark was within two Leagues of them, when Capt. Ambroſe haul'd up his Sails, and brought to, to wait for her, in Hopes that ſhe would run him on board before ſhe perceived him. When ſhe got within a Mile of the Rupert, ſhe haul'd by the Wind, by which Capt. Ambroſe ſaw ſhe had diſcovered him, and then he chaſed her with all the Sail he could make. About two o'Clock in the Morning on the 8th, the Rupert came within Gunſhot of her, but the Moon juſt then going down, and it being very dark, ſhe clapt upon a Wind, and the Rupert loſt Sight of her. Capt. Ambroſe continued his Chace, by the Wind, 'till Day light, and then ſaw her about three Leagues upon his Bow, going after an Engliſh Merchant Ship then in Sight, imagining ſhe had loſt the Rupert; but on ſeeing her again, ſhe crowded away with all the Sail ſhe poſſibly could, the Wind blowing very hard. The Rupert purſued with all the Sail ſhe could bear, and about twelve o'Clock at Night came within Gun ſhot of her; but it then proving little Wind, dark, and ſhe making uſe of Oars, Capt. Ambroſe once more loſt Sight of her. The 9th, at Day-light, he ſaw her three Leagues to the Windward, and continued the Chace, and at half an Hour paſt Twelve at Midnight came up within half Gun-ſhot of her, when they fired at each other, and continued doing ſo till half an Hour paſt Two in the Morning, when the Rupert came cloſe up with her, and exchanging a Broadſide, laid her directly on board, when they immediately ſtruck their Colours, and cried for Quarter. She was a Spaniſh Privateer of 24 Carriage and 20 Swivel Guns, commanded by Don Franciſco de L'Arrea, and had on board 187 Men; came out of St. Sebaſtians nine Days before ſhe was taken, and was compleatly fitted with a great quantity of ſmall Arms, Cutlaſſes, Pole Axes, and many more Inſtruments of War, but had not met with any Prize in that Cruize. She had twelve Men kill'd; two their Arms and Legs ſhot away, which cannot recover; and the Captain, and many more of her Men, greatly wounded. The Rupert loſt but one Man, who tumbled over-board in boarding the Privateer.

The Rupert, Capt. Ambroſe, is return'd to Plimouth from her Cruize in the Bay of Biſcay, but the Privateer mention'd above was ſeparated in a Storm the 23d of November, and is not yet come in: The Rupert in the Storm loſt her Bow ſprit, Mizen maſt, Fore-maſt, and Main topmaſt.
